Biomolecular candies from lab to market

Plastic is not just an isolated problem that we can banish from our lives, but simply the most visible product of uncontrolled consumption. Instead of wondering whether life without overused single-use plastic is possible, we instead take inspiration from nature and look at what can be (re)used to replace it. In the past 5 years, the group of scientists, engineers, designers and entrepreneurs developed solutions going beyond plastic and have been placed on the market. Science is typically the first step to making dreams and ideas a reality.
